AVIATION SAFETY

If you have lived in Alaska for any amount of time, you know a pilot. In fact, Alaska has more pilots than anywhere else making safety, training, and education critical to keeping our skies safe. Aviation in Alaska is unique when compared to other States, and flying in Alaska presents different challenges and requirements. Our Aviation Training Devices being available and in good working conditions help to fill that gap for everyone from the student pilot to the retired Airline pilots so they can continue training and honing their skills as safer pilots.

Your donation really does makes a difference to the aviation community, it helps to maintain all twenty-four (24) Aviation Training Devices (ATD) located in more than 14 locations available to all pilots in Alaska.

If aviation is your passion or someone's in your family please consider donating to the Medallion Foundation. Thank you for your support!
